What sets you off today often has an old root

Most of our painful reactions — the fear of being left, the feeling of never being good enough, the anger of not being seen — don't come from nowhere. They take root in inner wounds formed early: abandonment, rejection, betrayal, injustice, low self-worth.

The good news: a wound isn't a life sentence. Understood and worked through — with psychology — it can be transformed. This starter guide helps you spot your core wound and know where to begin.

How to use it

Read the 5 wounds, take the mini-test, then check your starting point. No judgment, at your own pace.

STEP 1

The 5 inner wounds

Abandonment

The fear of being left or neglected. You cling, or you dread being alone enough to do anything to avoid it.

Rejection

The sense of not having a place, of being “too much.” You shrink, you fear judgment if you truly show yourself.

Low self-worth (“not enough”)

The feeling of never measuring up, whatever you do. You self-criticize, you doubt your worth.

Betrayal / trust

Hard to trust. You control, or you protect yourself by keeping your distance.

Injustice / invisibility

The pain of not being seen, recognized, treated fairly. Anger, hypervigilance, exhaustion.

STEP 2

The mini-test

Check the statements that resonate most. The group with the most checks = your core wound (most of us have one or two).

Check what speaks to you

A · Abandonment

☐ I struggle to be alone. ☐ I fear people will eventually leave me.

R · Rejection

☐ I often feel “too much.” ☐ I fear being judged if I show my real self.

E · Self-worth

☐ It never feels like enough. ☐ I doubt my worth a lot.

T · Betrayal

☐ I find it hard to trust. ☐ I protect myself by keeping my distance.

I · Injustice

☐ It hurts not to be seen or recognized. ☐ I'm often on alert against unfairness.

STEP 3

Your starting point

Based on your core wound, here are the guides to start with:

Abandonment

Attachment Styles · Healing from a Breakup · Coping with Loneliness

Rejection

Confidence & Self-Esteem · Mixed-Race Identity · Misogynoir

Self-worth (“not enough”)

Confidence & Self-Esteem · Imposter Syndrome · Class Shame

Betrayal

Attachment Styles · Healing from a Breakup

Injustice / invisibility

Misogynoir · Everyday Racism · Racial Fatigue

And for everyone: Anxiety & Negative Thoughts — to quiet the mind while you work on the root.

How a wound is transformed

Each guide works your wound through 4 complementary lenses:

1. Psychodynamic — understand the root of the wound.
2. CBT — spot and ease the negative thoughts and schemas.
3. Humanistic — reconcile with yourself, gently.
4. Systemic — act on your environment and relationships.
