BEFORE YOU BEGIN

Understanding its influence and keeping balance

Pornography is very accessible, and your relationship with it can be harmless... or problematic: unrealistic expectations, comparison, lower real desire, sometimes compulsive use.

Without judging, this guide helps you understand its influence and keep (or regain) a healthy, free relationship with it.

Your intention

What you're questioning about your relationship with porn (or your couple's): _____

The 4 approaches

This guide works your topic through 4 complementary psychology lenses. Read, do the exercises, fill the workbook — at your own pace.

Psychodynamic — understand the root.

CBT — ease the negative thoughts.

Humanistic — reconcile with yourself.

Systemic — act on your environment.

What porn can install

Unrealistic expectations (bodies, 'performances', scripts), constant comparison, disconnection from the real and from connection: porn sometimes shapes our expectations without our noticing.

Becoming aware of it is taking back control.

Example

Marc realized his 'porn-modeled' expectations cut him off from real pleasure with his partner. Seeing it changed everything.

What it installs

What expectations (bodies, performances, scripts) might porn have installed in you?

Real vs screen

Write: 'Porn is fiction — not the model for real sex.'

→ Porn is fiction — not the model for real sex.

The thoughts and automatics

‘Real sex should look like this’, constant chasing of novelty, using it to manage stress or boredom: these automatics can install a circle that’s hard to leave.

Spotting them lets you choose, rather than be driven.

Example

Using porn whenever he was bored, Sami noticed the reflex — and began to question it.

My automatics

In what moments/emotions does your use kick in (boredom, stress, habit)?

Choose

Write an alternative when the automatic kicks in (another activity, a pause, connection).

→ I want to choose my use — not be driven by it.

Your values & your real sexuality

Beyond on-screen scripts, what do YOU want to experience in intimacy? Connection, real pleasure, presence: that's where a fulfilling sexuality plays out.

Reconnect with what truly matters to you.

Example

By asking what he really wanted to experience (not reproduce), Léo found desire for the real again.

My real sexuality

Write what you want to experience in intimacy (connection, pleasure, presence) — beyond scripts.

My values

How would a healthy relationship with porn align with what matters to you?

→ What I want to live in reality matters more than on-screen scripts.

Keeping balance

Concretely: notice if your use weighs on you (compulsive, impact on real desire or the relationship), reintroduce the real and connection, communicate as a couple if it concerns you. And if use becomes compulsive or distressing, a professional (sex therapist, addiction) can help.

The goal isn't a ban — it's a free, chosen relationship.

Example

By talking again with his partner and rebalancing his use, Yanis found desire and closeness again.

My balance

Does your use weigh on you (compulsive, lower real desire, relationship impact)? What would you adjust?

When to consult

If use becomes compulsive or distressing: note the idea of talking to a professional.

→ Keeping a chosen use, reintroducing the real — that's balance.
